

The slow decline of long-time runners

Marathoners usually get better over time, until their growing experience and confidence don't outmatch the decrease of their physical strength anymore. These twelve people are the most regular runners at Geneva's December Marathon: they didn't miss more than once in ten years. Same path, different age and conditions.

